

Eleanor P. Jones - 2

his in-laws over in the hollow, that his first wife took her life because she found out he was using tobacco on the sly".

THE END

Eleanor P. Jones,
14 Dart Avenue
Carbondale, Pa.

Approx. 55 words

SEN SEN

by

Eleanor Pritchard

Shortly after the turn of the century, the head-master in a coeducational boarding school, eager to maintain a high standard of living, one morning following the prayer service, faced the students accusingly.

His brow was clouded, his lips set in a firm line and, before turning to leave the chapel, in a most disapproving voice announced, - "S-E-N S-E-N spells cigarettes!"

THE END